

Natasha Strydhorst

Natasha Strydhorst is a Writing and Environmental Studies (geography focus) major from Calgary, Alberta (Canada). She was the mentor of a Geography 181 research project last year, which investigated a population of American Beach grass on foredunes. The love of the outdoors in general—and of mountains in particular—is what first drew Natasha to love the environment and Environmental Studies. Since her time as a student in Geography 181, Natasha has fallen in love with the FYRES program as well. She is looking forward to working with FYRES as the program coordinator this year.

As the FYRES Coordinator, Natasha helps prepare for labs by coordinating transportation and equipment, updating the website, and creating publicity materials.
